Shield, helmet and sword

The British Prime Minister Theresa May has the Sun in Libra, an air sign, that symbolises the motivation for the potency of new ideas that initiate social changes that demand the complementarity of dialogue, debates, conflicts and collisions, with the aim of establishing harmonies, dissonances and repulsions through which each part discovers, redefines and retains it's own identity.

Libra is a sign associated with the mental faculties required by the need for strategy before the conflict symbolised by the figure of Athene, the Greek goddess born out of Zeus head, whose attributes are the shield, the helmet and the sword, symbols of battle but also courage and cunning.

A Libra person understands that “the opposite of a correct statement is an incorrect statement. But the opposite of a profound truth can be another profound truth.”, according to the physicist Niels Bohr. Throughout her life, Theresa may will have the opportunity to develop qualities opposite to an air sign, associated with the water element, related with empathy, connection and the capacity to tune into collective feelings.

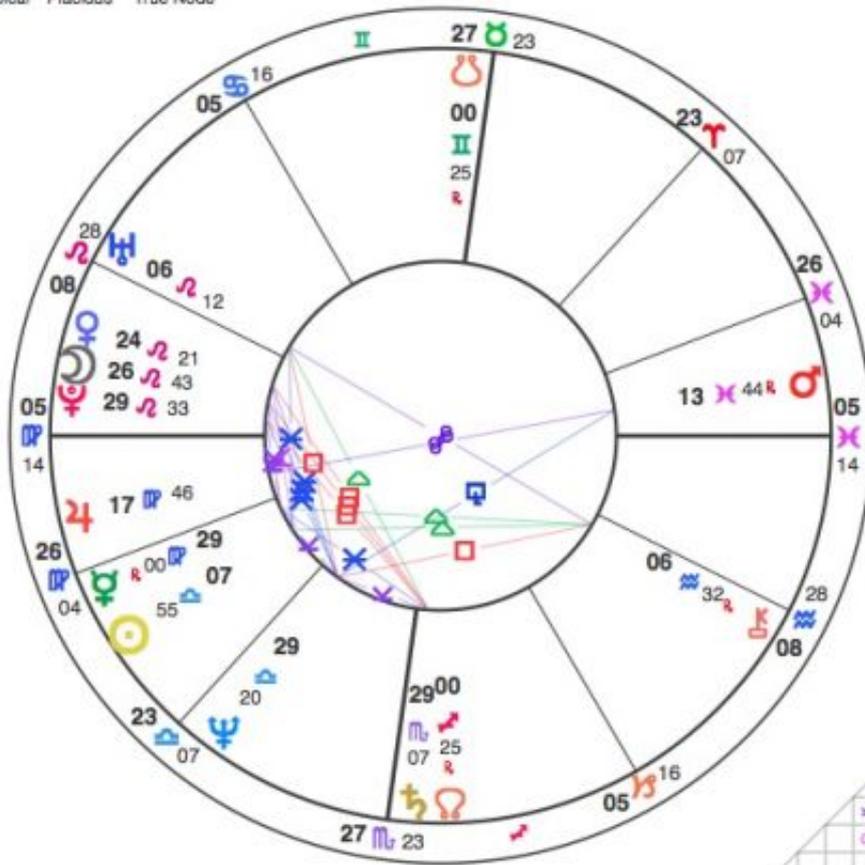

Venus, the planet that rules Libra, is in conjunction to Pluto, associated with collective cycles of transformation related to survival, that intensify what it touches in the birth chart, therefore adds the capacity to understand irrevocable evolution as it occurs in nature.

Libra leaders

The birth chart of the United Kingdom has the Ascendant in Libra, the same as the Sun of Margareth Thatcher, David Cameron and the current prime minister. Presidents, without exception, have strong contacts with the country's birth chart, that can include the Sun, associated with the government, the Moon, that represents the people, and the lunar nodes, associated to the development of the destiny of the nation.

If it is not true it is betrayal

With Saturn in Scorpio, the law, in Theresa May's birth chart is based on the need of honouring the authenticity of emotions that have to be true to generate changes in people, which implies that crises are preferable to betrayal and hypocrisy, both unforgivable for people with this placement, and if belonging to the individual, will contribute to the weakening of the planet that represents the structure created through work and vocation.

Saturn in Scorpio gives the person the capacity to perceive what operates beneath the surface of other people's presentations, of whom it is evident what they do not want to show.

Tenacity in times of crises

Saturn square Pluto, associated to deep collective transformations, including the purging of structures, connotes, in the personal birth chart, tenacity, strength and stamina, because the person is familiar with situations of change and crises that demand going back to basics.

The Crises of the Suez Canal

The seed moment of birth condenses patterns that also refer to events that are part of the sign (or spirit) of the times, according to astrologers, therefore the cover of the newspaper of the that day adds information that is part of what links a person with collective historic processes. During the square of Saturn and Pluto, present during the month of Theresa May's birthday, The Observer newspaper in the United Kingdom, reported that the conservative prime minister, Anthony Eden, had cancelled his meetings in the island, claiming a cold and instead flew to France to agree in secret with the president of that country and that of Israel, the military invasion of the Suez Canal after the nationalisation by Egypt, plan that resulted in a renewed end of the British empire, because England, that had a weak pound, decided not to go ahead after the pressures of the president of the United States, Eisenhower, that faced reelections and did not want to distract his voters. Thus, the square of Saturn, the structure, with Pluto, change, denotes the crises of authority in England in the world stage and Theresa May, in tune with this patterns arrives in power in 2010, in the middle of a national situation in which these themes resonate strongly.

Law and government

With Saturn, the planet that represents the organic law in the structures that sustain society, in conjunction with the north node that represents direction in life, Theresa May's experience is going to include the archetype associated with this planet, that rules tradition, government, administration, management, responsibility and authority.

Serving her function

With the Moon in Virgo, Theresa May naturally attempts to become the best synthesis of herself, developing all her skills in an integral way to be competent to contribute with her purpose in the world.
